

Search EMRO

About EMRO

Submitting materials

Media review links

Most recent reviews entered

EMRO-L

Total number of reviews in database:
3350

Garbage! The Revolution Starts at Home

Reviewed by Brad Eden, Associate University Librarian for Technical Services and Scholarly Communication, University of California, Santa Barbara

 Highly Recommended

Date Entered: 12/5/2008

This film follows the Mcdonald family of Toronto, Canada as they track their environmental footprint for three months. All waste is accounted for during this time period, including the children's lunchboxes. While the topic is serious and the footage provides interesting statistics related to how each of us makes a difference on global warming, there are humorous moments that provide perspective and reality. The director goes beyond just producing a film, by encouraging the audience to join the online community at the film's web site to recount their own experiences, share videos and stories, as well as ideas for change.

This video is highly recommended for all audiences. It provides a real-life situation that anyone can relate to, as well as a chance to make a difference.

2008

Distributed by
GarbageMan Productions, Inc., 632 College St., Suite 2, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M6G 1B4; 416-738-9163

Produced by Take Action Films

Directed by Andrew Nisker

DVD, color, 76 min.

Jr. High - Adult

Biography, Canadian Studies, Environmental Studies, Food, Humor, Parenting

Copyright 2008. All Rights Reserved. Distributors may use select segments for promotional purposes with full credit given to Educational Media Reviews Online.

Educational Media Reviews Online - <http://libweb.lib.buffalo.edu/emro/search.html>

Contact Information

Revised September 22, 2006